INTRODUCTION

This study examines campaign finance activity by political action committees in Massachusetts during the 2003 -04 state election cycle.

The Office of Campaign and Political Finance (OCPF) administers Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 55, which provides for disclosure and regulation of campaign finance activity on the state, county and municipal levels. Several types of political committees in Massachusetts file reports with OCPF, including those organized on behalf of individual candidates for public office; committees promoting or opposing ballot questions; committees registered on behalf of political parties on the ward, town, city and state level; and political action committees and people's committees.

PACs are political committees organized to receive and expend funds to support or oppose candidates in Massachusetts, generally based on a unifying principle or purpose as defined in their original statements of organization. People's committees are committees that started as PACs, but now receive contributions only from individuals at a maximum annual amount that is indexed biennially by OCPF every two years and is now $132. Contributions from people's committees do not count toward a candidate's statutory limit on annual aggregate contributions from PACs. (Unless specifically noted otherwise, the term "PACs" in this report also includes people's committees.)

PAC Disclosure Requirements

Section 18 of Chapter 55 requires PACs to disclose their campaign finance activity in reports filed regularly with OCPF. The filing schedule varies by the year: PACs are required to file reports once for a non-election year and three times for a state election (even-numbered) year. In an election year, those reports are filed eight days prior to the primary election in September; eight days prior to the November election; and on the following Jan. 20. For a non-election year, the single report is due on the following Jan. 20.¹

Section 18C of Chapter 55 requires PACs with receipts or expenditures of more than $10,000 in a two-year election cycle to file their reports electronically with OCPF. Committees not meeting that threshold are not required to e-file, but are still encouraged to submit their reports electronically. Reports e-filed by PACs and all other candidates and committees may be found in OCPF's Electronic Filing System, which is accessible through the Electronic Filing section of OCPF's website, www.mass.gov/ocpf.

For the time periods covered by this report, PACs were required to disclose their account balances at the beginning of each reporting period; aggregate receipts for the reporting period; aggregate expenditures for the reporting period; in-kind contributions for the reporting period; itemized receipts over $50; itemized expenditures over $50; and all outstanding liabilities.

The maximum amount a PAC or people's committee may contribute to an individual candidate is $500 in a calendar year. The campaign finance law also sets an aggregate annual limit on what an individual candidate may receive in total from all PACs. That limit ranges from $150,000 for a candidate for governor to $18,750 for a Senate candidate and $7,500 for a House candidate. (As noted above, there is no limit on the aggregate amount a candidate may receive from people's committees.)

Methodology

The statistical information contained in this study is based on information received by OCPF in campaign finance reports filed by PACs for the calendar years 2003 and 2004. Because the report is based primarily on the figures reported by PACs, not those provided by candidate's committees, the numbers contained herein are subject to amendment after a routine cross-check by OCPF with reports filed by candidates and committees. This study includes many corrections, additions and deletions that may occur as a result of any review conducted by OCPF or amendments filed by PACs, candidates or political committees. However, some changes, especially those taking place after the summer of 2005, are not included in this study.

Those interested in determining the exact amount of PAC and people's committee contributions accepted by individual candidates and committees are advised to check those candidates' and committees' reports for the relevant time periods to determine the amounts that were actually accepted. In some cases, a contribution reported to have been made by a PAC ultimately may not have been accepted by a candidate's committee, due to a variety of factors such as a candidate's policy concerning accepting such contributions or a candidate having already reached the annual aggregate PAC contribution limit before the reported contribution was sent. A PAC contribution attributed to a candidate is deleted from the candidate's total only if the PAC reports receiving a refund check from the intended recipient or receiving the original check uncashed.

Unless specifically noted, the totals used here reflect contributions PACs reported making to candidates for state or county office only, not those who held or were seeking local office only in 2003 or 2004. "State office" includes any of the six statewide constitutional offices (Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Treasurer, Secretary or Auditor), Governor's Council, Senate and House of Representatives. "County office" includes District Attorney, Sheriff, County Commissioner, Clerk of Courts, Treasurer, Register of Deeds and Register of Probate. The total amount of money PACs reported giving to candidates seeking city or town office is contained in this study, but that aggregate is not included in the contribution totals and breakdowns such as those by incumbency and party. Some state and county candidates may also have held local office, such as a selectman or city councilor running for or serving in the state Legislature, but for the purposes of this report are considered state or county candidates. In addition, some legislative incumbents may have sought local office, such as mayor, in 2003. Though they may have received contributions during their campaigns for local office, they are also treated as state candidates in this study.

The aggregate figures include candidates running in any special elections in 2003 or 2004. However, the breakdowns for winners of a seat and candidates on the ballot do not include those candidates. Those two categories apply only to the 2004 state primary and general elections.

This study was compiled and written by Denis Kennedy, OCPF's Director of Public Information, based on information filed by with the office by PACs. Those seeking further information on the study or any other facet of the Massachusetts campaign finance law may contact the Office of Campaign and Political Finance, John W. McCormack Building, One Ashburton Place, Room 411, Boston, MA 02108, or call (617) 727-8352 or (800) 462-OCPF. October 2005

FINDINGS

I. Overview

The 2003-04 election cycle was the busiest in terms of PAC contributions to state and county candidates ever recorded in an OCPF study. The total contribution figure of just over $2.4 million surpassed the previous record, from 1989 -90, by about $130,000. The new record was set in 2003 -04 despite the absence of elections for statewide offices, which usually boost contribution totals in a cycle.

Each of the two years in the most recent cycle placed in the top 10 for total contributions. The $1.4 million contributed in 2004 put that year at second all -time, which again is noteworthy because it was not an election year featuring candidates for statewide office. Of the top five years in terms of total contributions, 2004 is the only one that did not feature a statewide election.

The $1.022 million contributed in 2003 placed it 9th in the all-time annual list but was also the highest figure ever recorded for a year featuring no state elections at all, statewide or otherwise (not including any special elections due to legislative vacancies). All of the eight years preceding it on the list are state election (even -numbered) years.

The most recent PAC numbers cap a decade of resurgence in PAC activity since the mid-1990s, when changes in the law led to a decline in the total number of PACs and a resultant drop in activity by those committees.

Campaign Finance Activity by PACs 2001-02 and 2003-04 Election Cycles

2001	2002	Year	2003	2004
194	214	PACs contributed to candidates*	177	195
3,900	4,880	Number of PAC contributions to candidates	4,016	5,272
275	403	Candidates listed as recipients of PAC contributions	310	407
$958,778	$1,294,807	Total contributions by PACs to candidates	$1,022,045	$1,397,035
$246	$265	Average PAC contribution to individual candidates	$254	$265

* Contributions to candidates for state or county office only are included in this table.

The number of PACs registered with OCPF remained at around 300 in the 2003 -04 election cycle. A total of 211 made at least one contribution to a candidate in those two years, a proportion that is consistent with previous cycles. In addition, 414 candidates were reported as recipients of at least one PAC contribution during the cycle.

Labor, business and professional groups continued to account for the top contributing PACs in the 2003 -04 cycle. Unions accounted for 15 of the top 20 PACs, a drop of one from the previous cycle.

II. Breakdown of PAC Activity

Massachusetts PACs reported total contributions to state and county candidates of $1,022,045 in 2003 and $1,397,259 in 2004, for a two-year total of $2,419,304. (Contributions to candidates for mayor and councilor-at-large in the state's five largest cities – Boston, Cambridge, Lowell, Springfield and Worcester -- amounted to an additional $103,035 in 2003 and $64,025 in 2004, for a two-year total of $167,060. Unless noted, these local figures are not included in the breakdowns that follow.)

Activity by Cycle

The $2,419,304 in contributions in 2003 -04 is the highest total ever recorded in a two-year election cycle since OCPF began tracking and publishing PAC activity in 1982. Previously, the cycle with the greatest activity was 1993 -94, in which PAC reported contributions of $2,289,158. As noted above, the 2003 -04 cycle placed first despite a lack of statewide races, which traditionally boost contribution totals. The next four places on the top 10 list are held by cycles that included statewide elections.

Two-year Cycles with the Highest Total PAC Contributions to State and County Candidates 1982-2004

Rank	Cycle	Total	Statewide election?
1.	2003-04	$2,419,304	N
2.	1989-90	$2,289,158	Y
3.	2001-02	$2,253,586	Y
4.	1993-94	$2,140,468	Y
5.	1997-98	$2,136,116	Y

7.	1991-92	$2,033,883	N
8.	1987-88	$1,806,438	N
9.	1995-96	$1,669,127	N
10.	1985-86	$1,444,561	Y

Activity by Year

Though the 2003 -04 cycle posted the highest total contribution figure for a two-year period, it did not feature record annual totals. The 2004 total was the second -highest annual contribution total ever recorded by OCPF, trailing the record high from ten years before by just over $4,000. The 2004 figure is, however, the highest contribution total ever recorded in an election year that did not feature statewide contests. Each of the other four years in the top five in terms of total contributions featured a statewide election.

Though it ranks 9th all-time, the 2003 figure is the highest ever recorded in a non -state election year. Such off-years are known for having less activity than the average election year.

(e) = State election year. (s) = State election year that also included statewide offices.

(n) = Non-election year.

Average PAC Contribution

The average amount of a PAC contribution to an individual candidate in 2004 was $265, the same amount that was recorded in the last election year, 2002. That figure is the highest in a decade, surpassed only by the amount of $270 posted in 1994. Neither of those figures is a record: the highest average ever recorded was $331 in 1983. The all-time low was the $200 recorded in 1996.

The contribution average of $254 posted in 2003 is the highest for an non -election year since 1989, when the average was $266.

The relatively higher averages of the 1980s and early 1990s were due largely to two factors: the lack of any limit on PAC contributions to candidates until 1988 and, for the next six years, a contribution limit that was higher than it is today. At the end of 1994, the maximum annual contribution was lowered from $1,000 to $500, which eliminated larger contributions and contributed to the drop of the average in subsequent years.

Aggregate Spending

PACs reported total spending of $5,159,895 in 2003 -04, an increase of almost 13 percent from the previous two -year cycle. (The 2001-02 total represented an increase of 3 percent from 1999-2000.) Contributions to candidates (state, county and some municipal) accounted for 50 percent of all PAC spending in 2003 -04, a drop from the 54 percent recorded in 2001 -02 but higher than the 46 per cent in 1999-2000.

By law, a PAC may expend money “for the enhancement of the principle” for which it was organized, which may include other categories of expenditures as long as those expenditures meet that test. Examples of additional spending by PACs include administrative and fundraising expenses as well as contributions to other political committees, including federal and state party committees, local and federal candidates not registered with OCPF and ballot question committees. (See the table below for a breakdown of PAC contributions by the type of recipient.)

Breakdown of PAC Contributions by Type of Recipient

* Candidates for mayor and councilor -at-large in Boston, Cambridge, Lowell, Springfield and Worcester.

 Of the total given to party committees for the cycle, $156,150, or 93 percent, went to state committees: $135,450 to the Democratic State Committee and $20,700 to the Republican State Committee. The rest was given to their affiliates on the city, town or ward level.

NOTE: Breakdowns of past years have included contributions from PACs to state ballot question committees. There were no such contributions in the 2003 -04 election cycle; moreover, there were no questions on the statewide ballot in 2004.

Cash on Hand

In recent years, PACs as a whole have ended election cycles with more money than they had on hand at the start of the period. That was again the case in 2003 -04. The committees reported total cash on hand of just over $3.8 million at the start of 2003 and a cumulative ending balance of over $4.1 million at the end of 2004.

III. Contribution Recipient Categories

The most common type of recipients of PAC contributions in past election cycles were once again more likely to receive funds from these committees in 2003 and 2004. Specifically, candidates who were incumbents, winners of their elections and/or Democrats were the most likely recipients. In addition, PACs giving to political party committees were more likely to support Democratic committees on the state or local level.

Office Sought

PACs once again directed the majority of their contributions to candidates for legislative office in 2003-04. Candidates for the House or Senate received 86 percent of all contributions to state and county candidates in the two-year cycle, or $2,080,669. That figure is up from the 74 percent recorded in 2001-02 and marks a return to the 80 percent-plus legislative share posted in the two cycles before that.

A large reason for the increase in the percentage of contributions to legislative candidates was the absence of statewide candidates from the ballot in 2004. Candidates for one of the six statewide offices received about 4 percent of contributions, a decline of 11 percentage points from the 2001-02 cycle, when each of those offices were on the ballot.

On the Ballot

Candidates who ran for state or county office in 2004 accounted for vast majority of PAC contributions, continuing a longstanding trend. Ninety-six percent of all PAC contributions, or $2,351,724, went to those who appeared on the ballot. The comparable share in 2001-02 was 93 percent.

The remaining contributions went largely to incumbents who were not on the ballot, such as legislators who did not seek re-election in 2004, or to candidates who had some campaign finance activity after running in 2002, including some who sought statewide office.

Success of Campaigns

PACs once again usually steered their money to candidates who ultimately won their respective contests. Contributions to candidates who won their races in 2004 totaled $2,143,469, or 89 percent of contributions. That percentage was 14 points higher than the 2001-02 share, but exactly the same as the percentage on 1999-2000.

The eventual winners took in a larger share in the off-election year of 2003, with 92 percent. Their share traditionally goes down in an election year as the number of candidates increases: the winners' share in 2004 was 86 percent.

Party Affiliation

Democrats once again received the bulk of PAC contributions in the 2003 -04 cycle, with candidates who were members of the party receiving $2,245,309, or 92.8 percent of the total given. That figure is the highest ever recorded in an OCPF study, eclipsing the 92 percent of 2001-02.

Of the remaining contributions, $164,395, or 6.8 percent, went to Republicans. The remaining $6,550 went to candidates who were not enrolled in a political party.

Incumbency

Candidates seeking re-election were once again more likely to receive PAC contributions in 2003-04 than those who were not incumbents. Contributions to incumbents amounted to 87 percent of the total, or $2,116,657. Past percentages contributed to incumbents in were 78 percent in 2001 -02 and 84 percent in 1999-2000.

Incumbents received 93 percent of contributions in 2003 and 82 percent in 2004. The incumbents' share of contributions has traditionally dipped in an election year as challengers enter the races.

IV. PAC Characteristics

Number of PACs Contributing

Various PACs organized and disbanded over the two -year period, but the number of PACs registered with OCPF at any one time in the 2003 -04 election cycle stood at just over 300.

Of more relevance is the number of PACs that actually make contributions during an election cycle. In recent cycles, up to two -thirds of all PACs have been active contributors to candidates in any one year. The number of PACs making contributions to at least one candidate for state or county office was 177 in 2003 and 195 in 2004. The 2003 figure is the lowest since the 169 recorded in 1997 (which was also a non -election year). The 2004 total was higher, as is the case in election years, but is far short of the record number of 214 PACs recorded in 2002.

Top Contributors

PACs representing labor, business and professional interests were the most active committees in 2003-04, continuing a longstanding trend. Of the top 20 PACs in terms of contributions, 15 represented unions or labor organizations, including firefighters, police officers, teachers, plumbers and iron workers, both active and retired. That is one fewer such PAC than the total number that appeared in the top 20 for 2001 -02. Another four PACs represented professional or other business interests, including beer distributors, realtors, new car dealers, and optometrists. Rounding out the top 20 list was the House Democratic PAC.

Sixteen of the PACs on the most recent top 20 also appeared on the 2001 -02 list. That included the committee with the most contributions in both cycles, the Retired Public Employees PAC. That committee was also the top contributor in both 2003 and 2004.

A listing of the Top 20 PACs by contributions to state and county candidates for each year and for the entire cycle follows.

People's Committees

A people's committee is a form of PAC that receives contributions only from individuals up to a maximum annual amount that is indexed biennially by OCPF every two years and is now $132.² Contributions from people's committees do not count toward a candidate's statutory limit on annual aggregate contributions from PACs.

Contributions by people's committees in 2003 -04 rose to their highest total ever, with $196,144 in aggregate donations, totaling 8.1 percent of all contributions to state and county candidates. That ratio is slightly lower than the 8.8 percent posted in 1998.

While total people's committee contributions rose over 2001-02, the number of committees making them was unchanged. Eight such committees made contributions in 2004, the same number as in 2002.

The number of people's committees organized with OCPF has remained rather constant in the decade since the campaign finance law was modified to establish them. There were 10 such committees in existence at the end of 2004, the same number organized as of the same time two years before and one less than at the end of 2000.

The amount of the average contribution from a people's committee was once again slightly lower than the average for PACs as a whole. The average in 2003 was $241, $13 less than the annual PAC average. The 2004 people's committee average was $216, which was $52 lower than the overall average.

For the third straight election cycle, three particular people's committees made the list of top 20 PACs in terms of contributions: the Professional Firefighters People's Committee, the Eastern Massachusetts Bricklayers and the Sheet Metal Workers Local 17.
